This arises from the competition of American wheat, which puts down the pure of English wheatso low that the high routs can no longer be paid. The about times of American wheat in the English disadvantageous also to the Announan wheat disadevintageous accession on a process matter to these in America, also must look to England as the great marker for their surplus broadstores. A writer of the Eaglish Land system justly saws that coung to the inhorismos of these aloas and the perpetuation of an heightary titled aristocracy, to whose very existence large titled aristocracy, to whose very existence large titled aristocracy, to whose very existence large titled according to the head along discussions. large landed estates have been deemed necessary, Englishmen for ages have looked upon the ownership of extensive cural territory as the one sure and only-foundation for perpetual distinction. To "found a family" was the chief ambition of all the successful traders. manufacturers, browers and bankers of the country. To this end, the one source-sful means was to become possessed of large landed estates. Consequently, there was a competition for the purchase of land that forced prices up much beyond what would yield for the cap-ital invested anything like the percentage that it could earn in any other way. Even when 3-per cent, consols were as low down as 87, which is not more than lifteen years ago, band would be beaght, in preference to them, which would not yield the purchaser more than 12 to 2 per cent, on his investment Indeed, it was no uncommon thing to find estates purchased at prices which would yield no profit whatever, or could only be made to do so after the most expensive improvenients badancen added. As soon as the United States lagan to show signs of polina-nent particularity after the war of the rebulton and of financial, commercial and agricultural improvement, the conditions as between 3rd-ish consols and British land byan slowly but surely to be reversed. The first move apparent was a steady rise in the value of government securation. Consols began to croop up little-by little till they are more ensiderably above par. Not one after the marques of Biandbud eldestion of the line of Mariborough, one who in consequence of his relation with the portuge might have been supposed to favor the land over the land of the marity, authorities and the land more poly of the country published an arti-ele calling attention to the finiquity of the present arrangement, and domainding a reform of what he calls the feudal laws. He says the ineradicable fault of the system is that 1942 people in England possess two-thirds of its 20,920,000 acres, and asks: 'Can' a more degrading state of things than this be conceived. to the moral and ascial wall-being of a propless.

This argument was nothing so long as landowning would pay; but wasn it will not the argument becomes a convincing one, even with the titled aristocracy.

A new turn may, however, be taken. The land owners are a power in Great Britain, and a sentiment is said to be growing among them for another effor: to protect themselves against American competition. All such assuciations as the "star route" ring are necessarily composed of "hig" men of both parties. That course is followed as a matter of mutual protection-the rascals assuming that neither party will expose or prosecute them, when the the the good name of the "party" may be involved. Their estimate was correct as to the alleged congressional investigation committee. The main facts in connection with these "star route swindles were in possession of the demperatic chairman of that committee, and were deltherately suppressed. Postmaster General James and Attorney General MacVeagh are. bowever, real civit service reformers, and are not afraid of harring theif "party" by exposing and punishing raseals.
